

MILLIEGRAMS

Friendship without more between a woman and heterosexual male in an approximately similar age group is rare. Just as rare is sexual interest where the man is not in control. Why are women always expected to be the submissive ones?

I do not see how a man can be sexual molested. If he is not interested there is nothing much to do short of amputation.

I have never read a report in a newspaper of which I had first hand knowledge that was anywhere near accurate.

A completely ruthless desire to dominate, control and achieve their own personal ends is so built into most human males that Harry and his mob were going to be replaced by a fresh lot just as bad. Human aggression is like some giant bush. If one branch is cut off, it grows again. Killing criminals is like pruning roses. The blooms are even better next year.

Modern society seriously lacks facilities for people to meet each other. There is no village or society atmosphere. Singles bars and dating agencies are no substitute.

Seducing men is usually pretty simple. One needs to dress in an attractive way, but not something so extreme as to frighten him off. Next, one needs to provide him with an opportunity. Then when he makes his move, all the woman has to do is to cooperate. Sometimes the man will be a little slow in taking up his opportunity. Usually very slight encouragement is enough.

A good education and a post-graduate degree in business administration is a fine thing in its way but a good pair of tits are often more helpful.

There is a deeply ingrained social idea that men should always do the proposing and select the spouse and not women. There is no logic or sense in that. However, men expect it so much that it shocks them if some woman asks them. In my student days, I had read Pushkin's Eugene Onegin where the heroine proposes to the boy, he is so shocked he rejects it out of hand, and later after she has married someone else, he deeply regrets it. They both end up miserable.

If you live in a community without finding out how it works, you are seriously disadvantaging yourself.

A wedding present ought to be worth at least the per capita cost of the wedding reception.

A threat is often more dangerous and more difficult to deal with than the events if the threat is carried out.

It is important for children's own self image that they should feel that their father is at least as important as all the other children's fathers. Mothers don't seem to matter anywhere near as much.
